GRADUATES' SOCIETY RECEIVES LETTER

McGill Well Represented in American West

The secretary of the Graduate Society received the following letter from F. S. Spearman, M.D., a McGill graduate now resident in the American West. The letter has been passed on to the "Daily" for publication. It reads:

Rice, Arizona, Nov. 28, 1922
Editor, McGill News—

Dear Sir—Last month I was appointed physician at the station maintained at this point by the Department of the Interior; so please send me my McGill News to this address instead of Idaho Springs, Col., where I was last summer.

A school for Indian children is kept here, with capacity for about 215 pupils; the boys are taught different trades, farming, etc., while the girls receiving training in the various branches of domestic science. This is in addition to the ordinary school teaching.

We have a small hospital on the grounds as well, with nurse in charge under my supervision.

The Indians here belong to one of the Apache tribes. They originate from the same stock as the Indians of a large part of Western Canada, the Athapascan Race, and the language is practically the same.

McGill is quite well represented in this part of the world. L. O. Howard, Science graduate, is in charge of the International Smelter Company of Miami, while another McGill man, McLennan, has a similar position with the Miami Copper Company. At Globe, Mr. McBride, also of McGill, is manager of the old Dominion Copper Company. Globe and Miami are only about twenty miles from Rice, with a splendid highway between, maintained by the State. Dr. J. W. Flinn, McGill '96, has a T.B. sanatorium at Prescott. He is connected with the State Board of Education, and Arizona State University has conferred an honorary A.M. degree on him.

Flinn's two older boys were in the Canadian Aviation Service during the Great War.

A cousin of the late Principal Peterson was for many years agent at Fort Apache, about 65 miles northeast of Rice; he died a few years ago. Fort Apache was maintained as a military post for a long time, but has been recently abandoned, and I understand the intention is to make it over into an Indian school under the Department of the Interior.

Yours very truly,
F. S. SPEARMAN.

SUBSCRIPTION CAMPAIGN TO END SHORTLY

Makeup of 1924 Annual Completed Yesterday

Students Desiring Volume Must Sign Immediately

The arrangement of the 1924 Annual, Volume XXVI, of "Old McGill," from The Forward to The End, was completed yesterday by the Board Committee assigned for that purpose. The traditional book will comprise some two hundred and fifty pages, considerably larger than the preceding volume of the "Old McGill" series. The energetic work of the Annual Board has had most favorable results, and it is fully expected that the major part of the book will be placed in the hands of the printers and engravers before the university closes for the Christmas vacation.

The paramount question at the present time is that of subscriptions. A week ago subscription forms were distributed to the various years. The reports received so far have been fairly encouraging, but there are some juniors, and numbers of other students who have not yet signed away part of their caution money. They are asked to do so immediately, as the lists will be withdrawn before the end of the week.

The quantity of Annuals published will be limited to the number of names on the subscription lists, so that students desirous of possessing a copy of the 1924 volume must sign without fail.

The Business Manager, F. T. Collins, B.A., is in receipt of estimates from the principal printing and engraving firms in Montreal, and from several in other cities. The contract will be awarded next week, when the subscription lists will be augmented. The Board is exercising great care in awarding the contract, the reputation of the firms being considered as essential as the moderation of the prices.

"Old McGill" will be a very attractive book. Among its features will be special articles by the Chancellor, E. W. Beatty, K.C.; the Principal, Sir Arthur Currie; the Deans of the Faculties, Dr. Stephen Leacock, and several other members of the professoriate. Professor Basil Williams, head of the Department of History, is very kindly contributing an article on the comparison of English and Canadian universities. In addition to Professor Leacock's article, there will be others of a humorous nature. The arrangement of the 1924 Annual has been made only after great care, and is still subject to change.

The shape of the book will in the main follow that of last year, being a little longer. The cover will be pleasing, substantial, and of material that will insure its preservation. The Annual Board plans to include cartoons of noteworthy personalities in and around the University, including the leaders of the Mock Parliament, which should further embellish the publication of the junior year.

The most significant feature of the 1924 Annual is that it will form a complete record of university life. While emphasis will be laid on the junior year, and its varied activities, the volume will omit nothing. A place is being given the sectional clubs of McGill which have been excluded on several previous occasions. Biographies and individual pictures of the juniors, class pictures, pictures and write-ups of athletic organizations, clubs and societies, striking cartoons and cuts, and numerous special articles of a highly interesting order, all compiled under the careful eye of the Board, will form the main part of the publication.

As has already been announced, the Annual Board is pursuing a novel advertising policy in that the soliciting is done voluntarily by a committee headed by the Editor-in-Chief, J. M. Packham. In addition to the editorial duties of the Board, those of advertising make its responsibilities far from light. The committee has worked hard, and announces that the amount of advertising secured so far is encouraging. Any students whose parents, relatives or friends might advertise in the Annual, would do well to get in touch with some member of the Board.

While the time for taking pictures has passed, there remain a number of proofs, both of individual pictures and groups,

DISCUSSION PLANNED ON VITAL TOPICS

Open Meeting of Students' Council This Afternoon

UNION 5 O'CLOCK

Council Candidates Are to Give Platforms

The first open meeting of the Students' Council takes place in the Union at five o'clock this afternoon, and there promises to be some interesting subjects up for discussion. The regular business of the meeting will be carried out first, and then it will be thrown open for discussion to all of the students present, and all questions will be answered concerning the government of undergraduate affairs. The occasion of the gathering will serve also for the introduction of the candidates for the position of Faculty representatives on the Council, as each of the nominees will be called upon to give a short talk on the essential points of the platform on which he seeks election. The time during which each of the candidates may speak will be fixed, so that the meeting should not take an unusual amount of time.

Among the more important matters to come before the Council at the meeting this afternoon will be that of the financial status of the McGill Daily, and it is likely that the subject will also receive some attention when the students are given their chance to make queries and express opinions after the official meeting.

The financial position of the Students' Society is not very stable at the present time, and it is urgent that some radical steps should be taken if the student paper is to continue publication throughout the year. The cessation of publication of the paper would be a severe blow to all of the student activities, and it is expected that the Council will attempt to devise some means whereby the present

DOCTOR TODD ENTERTAINED WESTERNERS

Illustrated Talk on European and African Experiences

SEVENTY PRESENT

Arrangements Complete for Maritime-Western Dance

Seventy members of the Western Club sat down to a sumptuous dinner in the dining room of the McGill Union at 6.30 o'clock last night. The speaker of the evening was Dr. J. L. Todd, B.A., M.D., M.R.C.S., Hon. D.Sc., Professor of Parasitology at McGill, who gave a very interesting illustrated address on his European experience, and the Expeditions for the Liverpool School of Tropical Medicine to Senegambia and the Congo Free State in 1902-5.

When the inner man had been fully satisfied, Clelland, the president of the club, introduced Dr. Todd as a past honorary president. He then went on to say that Dr. Todd had been the Canadian representative on the American Red Cross Expedition to Poland, where he had been decorated by the Polish government, besides being a Commander of the Order of Leopold II. (Belgium). The president also stated that last year, while in Europe, Dr. Todd had sent a letter to the club, which was greatly appreciated, and that the club was glad to welcome him back.

Dr. Todd, in beginning his address, stated that it would have to be cut short because he had to catch a train early in the evening. The first slide thrown on the screen was the map of the world, because the speaker said he wanted to bring home the main theme of his topic. He showed how white men who have spread their dominions far and wide, and who have waged successful combat with other men only live in a small temperate strip of the world's surface. He brought out how they had been held back from the tropical countries because of dread diseases which attacked them and their domestic animals, because white men will not live where their domestic animals cannot live. He emphasized that it is disease and not climate that keeps Europeans out of the damper tropical districts, in fact, he said the temperature in the Congo was rarely as high as the summer temperatures in this country, but what sometimes made it unpleasant was the extreme humidity of the atmosphere. In the last twenty years the number of people who had died from the various tropical diseases was almost incredible, for example, cholera, a bacterial disease, killed many. A slide was then thrown on showing thousands of Hindu devotees bathing in the Ganges River. The water of this river they believe to be holy, and to cure all diseases. It is literally filthy, because of so many bathers, and dread diseases are spread through drinking this water. He said that leprosy was still prevalent, especially in warmer countries, where little precaution was taken.

Dr. Todd went on to say that various diseases of the tropics are never seen in this climate, for example, the sleeping sickness. He stated that many tropical diseases were transmitted by the bites of insects, and mosquitoes; the Anopheles mosquito carries malaria, the Stegomyia yellow fever, and the Culex, filariasis. He showed how the malaria parasite breeds in the stomach of the mosquito, from where it gets to the saliva of the insect, and thence into the blood of the bitten person. He spoke of various other insects which transmit diseases, such as the louse, which transmits typhus, the tick, which transmits a variety of diseases such as Texas cattle fever. It was thus brought out that the diseases transmitted by such insects prevented white men from living in the tropics. He said that the best way to eradicate the disease was to study the parasite and its method of life, and then strike at the weak spot. The next few slides were pictures of certain natives and the effects of these peculiar diseases upon them.

In order to show how close, in reality, the people here are to the tropics, Dr. Todd showed a picture of stork's nests, where a stork had been banded in Holland the previous spring. He went on to say that various expeditions have been made to Africa in order to study these diseases, and conditions obtaining at first hand. An interesting picture was then thrown on, showing a trap over the

STUDENTS' COUNCIL OPEN MEETING

This afternoon the Students' Council is holding an open meeting to which every student in the University is invited. The main subject for discussion is the financial condition of the "Daily", a forecast of which has been made for this year in the budget published yesterday.

The Council is faced this year with a problem of almost insurmountable difficulty with regard to finances. There was a deficit on operating expenses last year, and monetary conditions have tended to become less satisfactory this year.

There are four main divisions into which the revenue to be expended on undergraduate activities falls naturally—revenue from the Union, revenue from the "Daily", from the universal fee, and from the gate receipts at football and hockey games. The Union has been doing well this year under very efficient management, due to the whole-hearted co-operation and patronage of the students. The three other sources of income have been disappointing: due to decreased registration the universal fee collected has been $2,000 less than in 1921-22; the attendance at football games has not been as great as last year when the Centennial Celebration took place; and the revenue derived from advertising in the "Daily" has been alarmingly small. The only revenue-producer which can be strengthened at once is the "Daily", and the ways and means of doing just that are to be discussed this afternoon. The matter is of paramount importance to every student at the University.

When revenue and expenditures do not balance, and revenue is the deficient member of the system, there are two possible remedies—decrease the expenditure to meet the available income, or increase the revenue to meet the necessary expenditures. The Students' Council has asked the various bodies under its direction to submit budgets for the year showing the expected financial standing next spring, and on these statements an estimate has been formed of the condition of the finances of the Students' Society. The wise view has been taken that before any drastic reduction in proposed and believed necessary expenditure is made—which may somewhat curtail certain activities—every effort should be made to increase the revenue derived from the four financial pillars of the Society.

The "Daily" depends entirely on advertising and a portion of the universal fee for its revenue. Last year there was $1,600 profit; this year the estimate shows $1,400 loss, or a difference of $3,000, which must be met by the Students' Society. Surely this is a matter in which every student is vitally concerned. The undergraduates have rallied to the support of the Union so strongly, and have co-operated with the excellent management in such a hearty way, that they are expected to show as keen if not keener interest in the welfare of the college publication. The Students' Council has taken the lead in this matter, and has no doubt of the full whole-hearted co-operation of the undergraduates in the perpetuation of the present undertakings at McGill.

The matter of the Government being petitioned to establish International Scholarships, as Toronto 'Varsity has suggested to McGill, is to be discussed also, and a decision reached.

Every man is expected to attend the open Council meeting tonight.

WATER POLO

It is hoped that tonight will see the final game for the McGill Seniors in the City League Water Polo series, as a win for the Red and White brings the championship to the University once more. The men have worked hard for the past weeks, and have won every league game, so that the team now has a one-game lead over the other members. A loss tonight would mean a play-off if M.S.C. continues to win, but the whole University hopes with the team that the championship will be decided without that being necessary. The team deserves whole-hearted and vociferous support, and it is sincerely urged that the undergraduates will turn out loyally and cheer the team on to victory in the most crucial game of the season.

EDITORIAL NOTE.

It is with keen anticipation for news of the long-looked for Dormitory-Gym that the readers of the "Daily" await the statement of Sir Arthur Currie, which has been promised for publication within a day or two. The Principal granted an interview on the subject which was to appear this morning, but having the question very much to heart he has decided to write an article on the situation himself.

R.V.C. MUSIC CLUB TO HOLD MUSICAL

A meeting of the R.V.C. Music Club was held on Monday at one o'clock, in the Common Room. The most important business of the meeting was the election of officers, the result of the election being as follows:

President—Miss K. James.
 Vice-Pres.—Miss K. Perrin.
 Sec.—Treas.—Miss E. Cameron.

It was decided that the Club should hold a musicale on Tuesday afternoon, December 12th, at 4:30, in the Common Room. This will not be for present members only; all those who are interested in the club are cordially invited to attend. The names of those taking part will appear later in the Daily.

McGILL ORCHESTRA PLAYS FOR 'JAZZ HOUR'

The instituting of the weekly afternoon tea with music has proven a great success. The fascination of the jazz has drawn many to the Union for refreshment, who otherwise would not have gone.

And, indeed, why not? Very few places can offer the same standard of musical entertainment as the Cafeteria has in the past, and intends to do in the future.

On Thursday, the McGill Dance Orchestra has kindly offered to supply the music. And its some music. Jazz galore, and then pieces that make the tears come. Don't miss it. The opportunity comes only once a week.

CONCERN OF COMMUNITY IN INDUSTRY

Second Topic of Discussion at National Conference

60 FROM MCGILL

Students from All Canada in Toronto Dec. 28 to Jan. 2

"The Concern of the Community in Industry" is the second topic of discussion at the National Conference of the Student Christian Movement of Canada, to be held in Toronto, December 28th to January 2nd.

This Conference will be held to provide an opportunity to students in all the Universities of Canada to meet and to discuss problems that are confronting all Canadians, and to find a solution for them that would correspond with the highest ideals of mankind. Incidentally it will promote a better feeling of fellowship among students of Canada. Men who are qualified will speak on various questions which are understood to be at present the most vital. For the purpose of attending this Conference students are arranging themselves in groups in every Canadian University. Mr. J. G. McKay is leading a group in McGill, but for the sake of those who are not able to attend this group the following extract from the study book designed for the purpose will enable one to gain an idea of the type of discussion. It is understood, however, that men who have been attending this study group will be more likely to be chosen by the Committee to act as representatives of McGill. About sixty delegates will represent this University. It has been estimated that the cost of sending each delegate will be about $35, but $25 will be paid by the S.C.A., so that only the remainder will have to be borne by the delegate himself.

"By industry we understand that organization of human effort and resources which aims to supply the material basis of the life which we now seek to live. Any spiritual view of life will exclude the belief that life can be adequately interpreted exclusively on a material basis or as concerned merely with its own maintenance. On the other hand, the efficient provision for that material basis is one of the most important concerns of any community, and today the greatest challenge that meets the spiritual leader arises from the need of interpreting that aspect of life as a means of spiritual achievement. The material basis being so important, it is surprising to find that its provision is the one thing which the ordinary man takes for granted. Industry, indeed, is all too often thought of as a sphere in which rival but component elements wage their petty wars to the inconvenience of the citizens as a body. On reflection, however, we see that industry is just society itself organized for the supply of those material commodities and essential services without which it cannot exist or thrive. The efficiency of industry, then, cannot be estimated by ascertaining how far it promotes the sectional interest of any of its component groups of people. Its test lies in the efficiency of its functioning as a social organ to social ends. The educated man or woman who seeks full life will approach the study of industry with a view to discovering the manner and degree in which the social purpose of industry is achieved.

"These obvious statements are sharply challenged by those who regard the industrial process mainly in relation to their private, sectional or class interest. From one side the process is interpreted in terms of the owners of the machinery and as existing for the advantage of these owners. This view gives us capitalism. On the other hand the whole process may be interpreted as existing for the benefit of those who operate the machines, and this view leads to syndicalism. (Syndicalism is a term based on the common French word for the trade union). Against both these partisan views an increasing number of people assert that industry is a social function, and must be judged as it ministers to community life. When this view is made determinant it becomes a motive of action, and then the whole industrial process is regarded as a co-operative effort to serve social ends rather than a competitive effort to gain sectional or personal advantage. Many serious students believe that the obscuring of this aspect is the main factor in the existing situation and one engineer, Mr. H. L. Gantt, in his "Organizing for Work," asserted that the nation which first pays allegiance to the social view of industry will dominate the world.

"Many responsible people protest that the social view provides no adequate motive. They claim that unless the element of competitive struggle for profit is present, effort will fall off. Such a claim must be carefully considered, but it will be discovered that, after a long period during which the appeal has been made to this motive, the general mass of workers do not respond as might be expected to any such appeal. The cash nexus has failed to sustain the unity and efficiency of the industrial society.

CORRESPONDENCE

The Daily is not responsible for the sentiments of letters published in the correspondence columns. Signed communications from graduates, undergraduates and members of the faculties will be placed in print if they are not of too great length.

Correspondents are requested to observe the unwritten law of the newspaper office—that they write upon ONE SIDE OF THE PAPER ONLY.

To the Editor, McGill Daily:
 Dear Sir,—Having waited in vain for action from someone more intimately connected with the Players' Club than I am, I would like to put forward the following ideas for discussion:

- 1.—It is much to be regretted that the present situation has developed, but it is recognized that the Department of English is within its technical rights in the affair.
- 2.—That the necessity of a dramatic club of university-wide participation and support is self-evident.
- 3.—It is difficult to see why such an organization need be under the direction of the English Department, particularly at McGill, where said department has not so far exhibited any ability in organization or in choice of play material.
- 4.—That if the Department of English wishes to put on plays of its own for purely critical purposes it is entirely at liberty to do so without conflicting in any way with any other dramatic society.
- 5.—Finally that immediate steps be taken to form a new organization for the production of plays in order that McGill may not lag behind all other Universities on this continent in this respect.

Any discussion on these points will be welcomed.

Sincerely Yours,
 E. WALLACE WILLARD, Jr.,

difficulties can be overcome. At the last meeting of the undergraduates' governing body the matter was left over for discussion to-day, and some plan will have to be devised at this meeting for the rapid raising of additional funds. If possible, there will be no call on the students for additional subscriptions this year, but the active co-operation of every man will be necessary to avoid such a possibility.

There are several matters on the order paper for to-day's meeting, among them being the question of petitioning the government concerning the granting of scholarships to students in foreign countries, according to the plan that was published some time ago. The general outline of the programme to be discussed at the meeting of students from all of the colleges has been drawn up, but any amendments will have to be made to-day, and the whole matter accepted or rejected by the Council.

Already several students have signified their intentions of bringing up other matters for discussion at the meeting, and probably there will be still more who have given no indication of the subjects they will speak upon. The Council has signified its intention of answering as many of the questions put to them as they possibly can under the notice given to them, and they will take any suggestions put forth to them under advisement for definite action at future meetings.

Open meetings were first introduced some years ago, but none have been held for some time, and the present body has introduced the plan again in accordance with a promise made at the first meeting of the Students' Society which was held a few months ago. The favour with which the project is received by the students will be judged by the numbers present this afternoon, and the advisability of holding future gatherings of the same kind will be judged from the success of the venture to-day.

Following the general meeting there will be a gathering of all the class presidents in the university to confer with the Students' Council.

BOOKS ONE READS

IF WINTER DON'T

By Barry Pain

As everyone knows quite well, who is anybody at all, it is a social faux pas of the worst kind to admit ignorance of the classics of Mr. A. S. M. Hutchinson, and of his "If Winter Comes" in particular. You have only to mention the title in any well-conducted drawing-room to see even the lucky ones who have not read it turn up their eyes in a sort of devotional ecstasy.

Now Barry Pain, the brilliant author of half a score of books that rank among the highest in the literature of English humour, believes in keeping up with the times, and he has also read "If Winter Comes". But when he had finished it instead of prostrating himself if the dust out of sheer awe and wonderment he merely laughed. Next he sat down to write a most delightful parody of the book one hears so egregiously described as "the best novel of the year".

This book, which appeared in the English edition under the title of "If Summer Don't", is a remarkable piece of carefully sustained humour throughout. Mr. Hutchinson thought that it behooved him as a realist to give rather lengthy descriptions of all sorts of sheer trivialities. Do you remember the incident of the den? This is how Barry Pain takes it off:

"This," said Mabel, opening a door, as Luke began his visit of inspection, "this is your den."

Luke's ears moved. He kissed her twice. "But, you know, I cannot bear it. There are some words which I am unable to endure, such as salt-cellar, tuberculosis, tennis-net and den."

"Very well," said Mabel, a little coldly, "we'll call it your cage."

Then there is the annoying solicitor friend who used to get on the sensitive reader's nerves by talking like a machine-gun. Here is the parody version of the meeting on the sea-front at Brighton.

"I looked up. It was Luke Sharper. Looking ghastly. His hair was grey. His face was grey. Even his flannel trousers were grey. All grey and worn. I don't mean the trousers particularly. General effect, you know. Ears drooping down with no life or motion in them. I went up to him and asked him what brought him down to Brighton."

"Go away," he said. "I'm a leper. I'm an outcast. I'm a pariah dog. Go before I bring misery on you."

As with the dialogue and the incident so with the characters. Each of them is just sufficiently magnified under the lens of the caricaturist to enable one to laugh heartily where before one only smiled. Mark Sabre, now Luke Sharper, is just the same sort of harmless and much-misunderstood idiot, only more so. His wife in Barry Pain's version is still more the sort of selfish woman that any self-respecting husband would spank thoroughly every day before breakfast just as a matter of principle.

Be it clearly understood that Barry Pain is not in any sense of the word "attacking" either Mr. A. S. M. Hutchinson or his work. It is the function of the satirist and not of the humorist to do that sort of thing where it is necessary, and it is not in the case of Mr. Hutchinson. He is a hard-working novelist, who is putting his whole soul into his work, and it is not his fault if an indiscriminating public choose to make a fetish out of him.

In his earlier books, such as "Once Aboard a Lugger" and "The Happy Warrior," he has done some good work, but once he aligned himself with the "staccato merchants", as Barry Pain stigmatises them in his preface, he began to go down hill. There is much hope for him in that his latest work in spite of the ridiculously inadequate motivation shows a decided improvement from the point of view of style. But there is yet much to be done. Mr. Hutchinson for one thing must wean himself a little from his open-handed use of the three little stars of suspension. There was a clever article in "Punch" once connecting them with a certain well known brand of Scotch whiskey. But be that as it may, they savour too much of the amateur.

We have not heard the last of Mr. Hutchinson, and I think Barry Pain may have rendered him a real service by his parody. Rabid Hutchinsonites will not like the book. They will call it unfair and prejudiced. In any case their literary judgment leaves much to be desired. Barry Pain has given us an exquisite little piece of humour, and he has done much to further that excellent maxim, "Everything in its right place." For Mr. Hutchinson, the demi-god, he has given us "Mr. Not-somuchinson."—AJAX.

TRAMPING WITH A POET IN THE ROCKIES

By Stephen Graham

This is indeed a refreshing volume. Its author, a well-known writer of travel sketches of strange adventure in distant lands, notably Russia, has recently been exploring the wilder fastnesses of our own continent, and in company with Vachel Lindsay, the American poet, spent last summer in hiking through the almost unknown regions of the American and Canadian Rockies. Answering the call of the wild and the lure of the open sky, Graham left a notice "Not at home" at his Soho flat, and was off with a knapsack, a pot, and a blanket to accept the invitation of Vachel Lindsay to explore the Rocky Mountains. "One of the most wonderful men who ever broke silence with a song," says Graham of his companion. "He belongs to the same sub-species. Yes, a tramping species. His hat has got a hole in it, and so have his breeches. But he is a poet, and he sings of what the world will be when the years have passed away. He can charm a supper out of a farmer with a song. And I who have tramped without music know what a miracle that is." Vachel Lindsay must, indeed, have been a fine companion for such a tramp. He is the author of those superbly original, declamatory poems—"The Congo," "General William Booth Enters Heaven," and, in a lighter vein, "The Daniel Jazz," reciting which with his wonderful sonorous heaven-reaching voice, he took America, and, last year, London, by storm.

They had a great time, these two, the poet and the traveller, bumping through the forests and valleys and over the mountains, sleeping under stars, drenched by rain and dried again by sunshine, awed by night and the majesty of mountains, making songs, and talking poetry, politics, philosophy and what you will. And what they saw and felt and thought and did and talked about and wrote—all this as it has been preserved for us in this book makes great reading.

Here, for example, is a sample of campfire gossip chosen at random. As the two wanderers stretch on their blankets by the camp-fire on a mountain at the top of the world, they talk of the romance of trap-making.

"A poetical map of the world has never yet been drawn. It should have ships on its oceans and lighthouses on its rocks and mermaids under it, and stars over it," said Vachel. "Imagine how Blake would have drawn it."

"First you put in the North and South Poles, symbols of man's love of the inaccessible and the paradox of his striving life; then Cape Horn, stormiest point in the world, cape of innumerable wrecks, of the innumerable adventures of daring sailors. Then put in the Panama Canal, symbol of utilitarianism and our modern life."

"Then draw in a dotted line the keel track of Columbus over the ocean, and put an eye upon a peak in Darien looking downward and outward to the great Pacific. Draw the Mason and Dixon line. Draw 54° 40'—the "fifty-four forty or fight" line. Then for the old world, make the coast line of China and then mark the Chinese Wall built to keep out the Huns, then draw the caravans of the hordes. . . . You must put in Athens, the birthplace of the ideal, and Marathon, and then Rome, the birthplace of materialism, the capital of capitals, seat of the Caesars. And then St. Helena, symbol of the doom of would-be Caesars. . . . Mark in the mysterious Nile, and the place where the Sphinx looks out from the sand. Mark Bethlehem and then Jerusalem—" Thus they schemed and mused and made many maps in fancy before falling asleep under the stars.

Two unusual and very attractive features of this book are the symbolic decorations by Vernon Hill, and the free-verse poems with which the author—or is it Mr. Lindsay?—has concluded each chapter. Let us also in conclusion quote one or two:

Going tramping again,
Going to the mountains,
To recapture the stars,
To meet again the nymphs
Of the fountains.
To visit the bears,
To salute the eagles,
To be kissed all night by
Wild flowers in the grass!

Two stars arose above the mountain's head,
Two stars looked down upon the world in bed;
Looked through the window-panes
And saw the world at home,
From Babylon to Tyre, and Rome to Rome.
What if the stars, lifting their tiny lamps,
Were but like us, a couple of old tramps?

Heaven's tramps, the stars, blazing
Their trails they go,
From mountain-top to mountain-top
And snow to snow.
Thy Kingdom come, O Lord,
As once it came,
May it come again!
For once it came upon the mountains,
It came upon the wings of the morning
Amid the flowers and adown the streams.
It came into our eyes;
It came into our hearts.
Thy Kingdom come, O Lord,
As once it came,
May it come again!

PEREGRINE'S PROGRESS

By Jeffrey Farnol

There was a time, not so far back, when the purpose of a book was to tell a story, and he who told his story well was a good author. But times and tastes are travelling companions, and the literary world today has set up other standards. The cry is originality, and all else is sacrificed with that as a goal. Some few with antiquated tastes still persist in reading Dickens or profess an interest in Thackeray. To these Jeffrey Farnol makes his appeal. The reader need look for no searching analyses of present day society, nor for a dissertation on the latest fancy be it psycho, physio or radio; but if he cares to read books that contain more charm and beauty in their chapter headings alone than can be found in a score of today's best-sellers, then Jeffrey Farnol is his man.

"Peregrine's Progress" differs from his other works chiefly in the respect that it is his latest. Read one of Farnol's books and you have read them all. More than that you will read them all and delight in their sameness. There is never any need to turn to the last page to see how it all ends. Farnol's books always end happily. If not he immediately writes a sequel in which all damage is repaired, and the reader closes the second book with a sigh of sincere relief and a "Good old Farnol."

And "Peregrine's Progress" is conceived in his happiest vein. It is concerned with Peregrine Vereker, a lad well-born and well-bred, who seeks and finds his manhood, his happiness, and the fulness of life in "following the wind, tramping the woods and consorting with all and sundry."

It is a story of England at the time when it was the custom to be polite to strangers, frank to your friends and sarcastic to your enemies, of the England when libel was atoned for in the court-yard not the court, when the might of the pen still bowed to the strength of the sword, when the best argument was a duelling-pistol and the best drink, beer; when love was life and life was love. It is in short a story of England as she never was, and a damned good story at that. Pardon the old English. —AGAG.

PLAYS & THE LIKE

HIS MAJESTY'S

From the reviewer's point of view it is a pity that a criticism of Mr. Walter Hampden and his company on their present visit must, owing to the exigencies of publication, be based solely on Monday night's performance of "A New Way to Pay Old Debts" by Philip Massinger.

It is not surprising to find that a student of the Elizabethan Drama of Mr. Hampden's calibre does not confine himself to Shakespeare alone. After Jen Jonson, Massinger is probably the leading figure in that abundant galaxy of post-Shakespearean playwrights, and his work bears a most decided impress of his great master's influence. The flashes of genius are absent, perhaps, and he lacks Shakespeare's abiding clarity of structure. In this respect it might be mentioned that the play as presented on Monday at His Majesty's is a decided improvement on the original. The shortened arrangement into a prologue and two acts with the introduction of a few explanatory lines is much more suitable for a modern audience than the rather lengthy five acts of Massinger's original.

"A New Way to Pay Old Debts" is a singularly convincing character study. Sir Giles Overreach, the central figure, is a rich parvenu, domineering and unscrupulous, who considers that the best way to disguise his plebeian origin is to force his only daughter into an aristocratic marriage. Unfortunately, as Sir Giles Mr. Hampden can during the first part of the play do little more than make good use of his imposing stage-presence and his rich, deep voice. From the moment that the bully finds his plans are going awry, however, until the mad scene at the very end so strongly reminiscent of Mr. Mantell's "Lear", his acting takes on that force and colour coupled with the most perfect artistic restraint which has made such a masterpiece of his "Hamlet".

Mr. Rowan as Sir Giles' ne'er-do-well nephew, Wellborn, hardly makes the most of what is indeed a rather hard part. Miss Hall and Miss Kearns are excellent as Lady Allworth and Sir Giles' high-minded daughter, Margaret. As is usual with any company that Mr. Hampden has ever brought to this city any of the minor characters, whose function it is to supply the comic relief, are excellent little thumb-nail sketches of eccentricity. Mr. Kelly's ever-hungry Justice Greedy and Mr. Cushman as the simpering Marrall are very convincing.

Among others there is one feature alone in Walter Hampden's productions that raise them on to a level of their own, and that is their artistic staging. As a result of what must be very painstaking direction the actors always seem to be standing in tableau attitudes. In this respect in the scenes at Lady Allworth's house the stairs leading up to the antichamber were used to especially good advantage. Mr. Hampden is also a stickler for detail in his furnishings and has a discriminating eye for colour, so that his plays always form a convincing and a charming ensemble. It is all very well to rave about Shakespearean simplicity. Shakespeare himself would have been the first to take advantage of the improved stage-devices of the present day.

Taken all in all, "A New Way to Pay Old Debts" has been made into a very adequate vehicle. It is a quaint enough comedy with its asides and naive moralizing. As one might expect Montreal did not flock to the theatre. To the average theatre-goer something like the "Demi Virgin" has vastly more appeal. The Massinger play will be repeated on Saturday night.

THEATRE PARISIEN

If there is any truth in the expression "Laugh and grow fat", the show at the Parisien this week should be worth about ten pounds an hour to any individual. From start to finish "Tire-au-flanc" is "one continual hysteria". Without any exaggeration, it is the funniest thing I can remember. And it is quite free from vulgarity. Two men (already as fat as men could conceivably be) sitting behind me, remarked that if they had to laugh as much in the last part as they already had, they would never be able to get home. Though gracefully slender (?) I sympathize with them.

The honours this week go to Mr. Monteil for the best piece of acting he has yet given in Montreal, with Mr. Therval a close second. The cast is distributed in a novel manner giving each actor a chance to take a part he has not yet done in Montreal. I had begun to think the company could not show versatility; there has been so much sameness to their vehicles. But in "Tire-au-flanc" they show themselves to be ACTORS. Robert Gilles will bear watching. He has the stuff of which leading men are made; although he carries a minor part this week, he does it well.

Tuesday night, a few unforeseen accidents added to the hilarity of the play, but even without these incidental bits of slap-stick, the play is a "corker".

The Parisien is a delightful little theatre, the actors are good, and if any McGill undergrad. wants to hear fluent French (not always elegant, perhaps, but still fluent) I cannot too strongly recommend "Tire-au-flanc". —CHIP.

STUDENT VERSE

TO AN OLD TUNE

Let us dig a deep grave for Love—
For Love is dead, you know—
Seek we a willow bank
And there lay him low.
A willow tree and a cypress,
And a sad weep tree, too,
Will weep for him at the graveside—
My dear, will you?
We will cover him with roses
Entwined with white lilies
And bitter-sweet forget-me-not
And daffodilies.
And we will cross his frail, pale hands
Like flowers on his breast.
Then we will leave him there alone,
In earth to rest.
We'll close the hideous grinning grave
And smooth the turf above,
And go unkind our separate ways,
Bereft of Love.
But I shall wait three eager days,
Three days of hope and pain,
Watching for Love to rise, and come
To us again. —S.

NOTES BY THE WAY

Professor Allison in one of his recent elongated reviews written for a certain local newspaper, claims that Hugh Walpole shows the worst possible taste in his new book, "The Cathedral," and that he is "fouling his own nest" by failing to treat the clergy of the Church of England with the profound respect that Professor Allison appears to think they deserve, and this merely because Hugh Walpole's own father is a bishop. We would rather be inclined to say with another professor of English that for that very reason he speaks whereof he knows.

Alas, the good die young, and the two-years-old Players' Club has sunk into an early grave. Of course everyone quite understands that its demise was unavoidable. The students in general were beginning to take an interest in it and that would never do.

What we want to know now is, who killed Cock Robin? Echo answers WHO. Also is there any chance of its emulating Lazarus?

We have been asked whether the film entitled "The Sin Flood" is a comedy or merely a sermon. If the former the humour is a trifle evangelical, and if the latter it is in excruciating taste. Another instance of a good original ruined by an indiscriminating producer.

Overheard by our distinguished dramatic critic at His Majesty's on Monday night after the play. A member of Montreal's elite, commenting on "A New Way to Pay Old Debts"; "Well, of course, you know, that pre-Shakespearean stuff never means much to me." Shades of Phil. Massinger! ! !

nest of the white ants or termites. The ants fly up and strike the cage, and are caught in bagfuls. When cooked they are very greasy and of a nutty flavor. The next picture was of a large plant parasite, which was slowly killing a palm. This was followed by the picture of a Mohammedan chief and his band, showing drums of all descriptions. Indeed, the speaker said, modern college yells and jazz music, must surely have originated in the African jungle.

Another interesting picture was that of natives throwing the branches of a certain tree into the water. This poisoned the fish, which were then speared and used for food. The speaker went on to tell that an expedition to study the sleeping sickness, used monkeys as subjects for experiment. It happened that a flock of sheep passed the monkey quarters every day, and the monkeys used to come down and pick the ticks from the sheep. This was finally worked down to such a system that each sheep used to come to the same monkey every evening.

Dr. Todd said that all work in the study of such diseases has resulted in much loss of life, and that expeditions of that kind involved a great deal of personal risk.

The speaker then turned his attention to rural Poland. A slide was thrown on showing a typical village, the houses being of clay, with thatched roofs. The forests are all planted, and the fields well tilled. Another picture showed a splendid herd of Holsteins. But it is the cities which are far behind, for instance, instead of fire alarms, there is a tower on which a watch who, when he sees a fire, calls out to those in the street, who rush to the scene. At this point Dr. Todd said he would have to leave, but he said the expedition had been successful in discovering that typhus was carried by lice, and the means which should be taken to prevent its spread.

The club then gave three cheers for Dr. Todd, and proceeded with outstanding business. The business of previous meetings were read and adopted, and various committees reported. The club expressed their appreciation of the services of Messrs. Vongo, Patterson and "Jazz" Harrison. Chadsey then rendered two piano solos, which were very well received. The executive exhorted all the members to take out their membership cards as soon as possible, and to make no delay in securing their tickets to the Maritime-Western Dance, as there are only fifty tickets available for the Western men.

The McGill yell concluded an excellent evening's entertainment.

FORTY LECTURES ON EXPORT TRADE

A course of about 40 lectures will be given early in 1923, partly by the University and partly by the Department of Trade and Commerce, Ottawa, and the Canadian Manufacturers' Association. These lectures are primarily intended to instruct and assist exporters or would-be exporters in the best ways of establishing themselves securely in foreign markets, and will cover such important aspects of commerce as:

- 1.—Study of foreign products and foreign markets.
- 2.—Sources of commercial information.
- 3.—Transportation systems and customs regulations.
- 4.—Preparation of goods for foreign markets, including methods of packing.
- 5.—Choice of agents and representatives.
- 6.—Foreign exchange and the financing of shipments.
- 7.—General considerations bearing on important phases of international trade.
- 8.—Foreign correspondence.

The lecturers in this course have been named and include members of the Department of Trade and Commerce, McGill University and others. Dr. Leacock, Dr. Hemmeon and Prof. Sandwell, Lt.-Col. L. M. Cosgrave and R. S. O'Meara are among the speakers.

It is interesting to note that one of these men, R. S. O'Meara, is a recent Commerce graduate of McGill. Before graduation in 1921 Bob O'Meara was a prominent figure here, holding many important college positions including Arts representative to the Students' Council and president of the Western Club. He is now connected with the Department of Trade and Commerce.

The lectures will be held at McGill from January 29 to February 10. The following is part of the course to be given:

- 1.—"General Economics of Trade," (3 lectures), Dr. Stephen Leacock.
- 2.—"International Trade," (3 lectures), Dr. J. C. Hemmeon.
- 3.—"Theory of Transportation," (3 lectures), Dr. Hemmeon.
- 4.—"Economic and Commercial Geography," (6 lectures), Prof. B. K. Sandwell.
- 5.—"Special Trade Topics," (4 lectures), Lt.-Col. L. M. Cosgrave, R. S. O'Meara.
- 6.—"Documentation," (5 lectures), R. S. O'Meara.

POLO GAME SCHEDULED WITH M.S.C.

McGill Hopes to Capture City Championship Tonight

M.A.A.A. TANK

Rooters Urged to Give Team Deserved Support

This evening the college seniors will meet the M. S. C. team at the M.A.A.A. tank at 8.15. Quite a number of men have been on the sick list, but it is most probable that they will all line up this evening feeling fit and determined to continue their victorious career. The M.S.C. aggregation being one of close, hard checkers, and hard shooters, will undoubtedly give the McGill men an interesting time, but with their superior speed the collegians hope to sag the goal frequently. It is expected that Vernon and Ross will effect some good combination plays, while on Munroe will fall the task of playing an effective defence and forward game, as occasion requires. With Anson and Laidley on defence, the shots to the goal will be well earned. As to the goal-keeper, there is the sad story. Graham-Browne, the sure goal-keeper, may not be on the line-up tomorrow evening. He was suspended by the Athletic Association for not having been physically examined before playing polo, but on application was reinstated by that organization, but this has not as yet been sanctioned by the Committee on Physical Education, so Graham-Browne may not be able to play. Neglect to observe this rule has interfered greatly with the activities of the Swimming Club this season. Kyle, of the intermediate team, has been suspended for two games, and the weakened intermediate team lost where they might have won. Graham-Browne off the seniors, will greatly affect the championship hopes of the team. It is expected that Jardine, the goal-keeper of the Intermediate team, will guard the nets for McGill this evening. While Jardine has made a name for himself in the Intermediate League, he lacks experience, and will have a big job on his hands to stop the shots so often featured in Senior games. There are great hopes for him, and there are those who say that he will show to-night that he is as good a man in Senior league as in Intermediate. The team is fit, but this is not enough; it needs one thing above all, and that is the support from the students which has often been lacking in the past. Nothing will inspire the team to greater efforts than to see the seats about the pool filled with fair co-eds adorned with red and white ribbons, cheering it on to victory. The college men are also asked for support, so that the tank will echo and re-echo with McGill yells, and the public may realize what a wonderful thing the McGill spirit is. Tickets will be on sale in the M.A.A.A. this evening.

IMPORTANT EXTRACTS FROM ATHLETIC RULES

There are several very important clauses in the regulations governing student activities at McGill which relate to athletics, and which appear to be practically unknown to most of the undergraduates. Because the lack of observance of these simple rules is causing considerable difficulty for some men who wish to engage in athletics, certain of them are being reprinted below in the hope that the greater publicity given them will have a beneficial effect.

Medical Examinations of Students
All students entering the University for the first time, and all students of the higher years who desire to participate in competitive athletics or otherwise engage in violent physical exercise, must, during the current session, first pass a Medical Examination to be held under the direction of the Director of the Department of Physical Education.

It shall be the duty of the managers of the various clubs who are about to compete in any athletic contest, to submit to the President of the Athletic Association, a complete list of the possible competitors in such contest. These names must be submitted at least one day before the contest occurs, otherwise such games may not count towards qualification for insignia.

No student shall be permitted to participate in any form of competitive athletics unless having been previously examined during that session, under penalty of forfeiting any insignia that he may have won, and of being debarred from participation in all University athletics until reinstated by the Executive of the Athletic Association, and a two-third vote shall be necessary for such reinstatement.

Uniforms
No other uniform than the one prescribed by the various clubs shall be worn by men representing that club in any athletic contest.

The promiscuous use of non-regulation uniforms and the wearing of "foreign" badges on the campus, or at any University Athletic contest, is prohibited, and if this offense be persisted in after due warning, such offender may be debarred from participation in University athletics until reinstated by the Athletic Association.

INDOOR BASEBALL MANAGERS ELECTED

Inter-Faculty League Organized to Play Soon

A meeting of the Indoor Baseball Club was held in the Union last evening. The primary object of the meeting was to discuss the matter of the inter-class league; whether it should continue until the New Year or whether the eliminations should begin at once. The latter course was finally agreed upon, as it was thought that if the schedule continued until after the vacation, it would interfere with the City League and the inter-faculty league.

This will be the first year that an inter-faculty league has been played at McGill, and it is thought that it will prove to be very popular. The election of the faculty managers took place, with the following results:—

Arts—G. Nairn.
Comm.—R. S. Davis.
Dent.—Jack Lynch.
Law—M. Gaboury.
Med.—R. B. Henry.
Sci.—E. R. Smallhorn.

Each faculty manager will be responsible for the choosing of the faculty team, and for the arranging of the practice hours. In case that the manager is a player, he may select an assistant manager to handle the team during the games. The faculty managers will be notified when the practice hours are available, or else may arrange hours on application at Molson Hall.

The inter-faculty schedule will be published in the course of a few days, although no games will be played before the completion of the inter-class series.

A letter was received from the Devonshire School, asking for a volunteer to coach a ball team of juvenile players. G. V. Kearns blushing accepted this post of honor.

The matter of City League baseball was discussed, and the prospects seem bright for a most successful league. There will be two or three additional teams in the league this year. Inter-collegiate Baseball was also briefly touched upon. So far nothing definite has been heard from Varsity or Queens, but it is expected that they will be heartily in favor of the intercollegiate proposition.

The schedule for the semi-finals of the inter-class league is being prepared now, and will appear in the Daily to-morrow. In all probability the first game will be played in the Baron Byng School on Friday night.

VARSITY HOCKEY TEAM HAS FIRST WORKOUT

The Varsity Hockey team was successful in their first work-out with the Granites last Saturday. The team is not yet in condition, but some old men are back and the team is reinforced by several promising new-comers. Prominent on the Varsity team this year are Carson, Rowell, Ferguson, Hudson, Westman, Sutton and Sommerville. Sutton is a Woodstock Collegiate man who played with the Woodstock Juniors last season. He is fast and a determined back-checker, and with polishing should make good. During the third period Langtry performed brilliantly for U. of T. Queenville, who plays defence with Rowell, was a junior with Sudbury last year, while Rowell starred with the U. T. S. Canadian Junior champions of 1919. Evans is an old man with the Varsity team, and Sutton has been with Lindsay, and Swabey with R.M.C.

Varsity is handicapped with the loss of several of last season's players, but possesses promising new material, which will become evident with a few more workouts and training.

Varsity defence is entirely new, while three of last year's men are back on the forwards. Wright, who played on the forward line last year is not on the team. Langtry played goal last year, and is perhaps one of the best goalers in Eastern Canada.

The McGill Senior hockey team is scheduled to play three games in Boston, on Dec. 28, 29 and 30, and will go to New York at a later date.

SUBSCRIPTION CAMPAIGN TO END SHORTLY

which have not yet been returned to Notman. The Board requests that proofs be returned immediately. Biographies, class and organization write-ups have not been submitted as promptly as desired, and before the close of this week they must all be handed to H. C. Alward, Med. '24, the Biography Editor, the Union Porter, or to a member of the Board. The persons preparing cartoons or other sketches are asked to hasten their work, as quite a few excellent sketches have already been accepted by the Art Editor, P. R. Wilson.

The student body of McGill is urged to support the Annual Board by subscribing for Volume XXVI, of "Old McGill." The contract to be awarded shortly will only provide for as many Annuals as there are names on the subscription lists. Each class in the university has a list. A record number of names by the end of the week is highly desirable, and hoped for by the Board.

Boxing and Wrestling Bouts Features of Evening

On Saturday night delegates to the convention of the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada will be guests of the Quebec Branch of the Union at a smoker to be held in the McGill Union when some of the best boxers and wrestlers of the city will stage what are expected to be exciting and close bouts. The M.A.A.A., C.P.R.A.A.A., N.A.A.A., the Highlanders, Cercle Outremont, St. Brigid's, University Settlement and McGill B., W. & F. All are co-operating in the entertainment to the visitors from all parts of Canada who are assembling in Montreal for a conference on December 8th and 9th.

Without a doubt this will be one of the outstanding boxing events around McGill this winter, and should provide some hard fought and interesting exhibitions of real boxing and wrestling. Although the programme is primarily for the delegates, yet it is understood that McGill men will be welcome.

Mr. George Smith, who is coaching the McGill wrestlers, is in charge of the wrestling programme, and contemplates some exciting times when the wrestlers from the Cercle Outremont, McGill and N.A.A.A., vie for honours.

The boxers who will likely represent M.A.A.A. include: Mickey McGowan, Louis Detmer, Bert Light and Billy Mill. The McGill boxers probably will be: Adams, Schieffer, Marshall, Merritt and Brewer.

The Inter-Faculty Wrestling Eliminations will continue tomorrow at 5.15 at the Union. The bouts so far have been very interesting and the men who will compete are well known wrestlers. There is still room for a man weighing 110 pounds. R. Silver, Arts I, is so far the only entrant in this class and it is hoped a flyweight will oppose him. Special notice should be taken of the fact that all contestants must be physically examined before wrestling. This matter should be looked after at once.

At a smoker to be held at St. Anne's on Friday night the following wrestlers will compete:
118-lb.—McDonald vs. Bryant.
135-lb.—Howes vs. Clement.
158-lb.—Armstrong vs. Vineberg.

Windy Brewer was again in action.
Pat McCullough, one of the old timers, still shakes a wicked gamblit.
Snow is demonstrating some great style, and shows vast improvement.
The Kellar-Wiggins bout for Thursday night at 5.45 p.m., will be a card.
The final elimination bouts will be staged at St. Anne's Friday night. The contestants are:

Arts: 125 lbs.—Ross vs. McClean.
Science: 125 lbs.—Pitt vs. Donohue.
Commerce: 145 lbs.—Azeff vs. Murphy.
Medicine: 175 lbs.—McClean vs. Brown.
Flap of 1922 with her automatic complexion, forged eyebrows, synthetic blush and anonymous ears, looked like prima donna in Madame Tusso's wax works. If you walked down street with one you felt like a window dresser in a big department store escorting one of his jointed dummies out to lunch.
